H.J. Baker's Tiger-Sul Products (Canada) Co. Subsidiary Closes on New Facility to Produce Sulphur Bentonite Fertilizer Products

WESTPORT, CT USA – (January 9, 2013) – H.J. Baker announced their Tiger-Sul Products (Canada) Co. subsidiary has closed on its new Irricana, Alberta, Canada facility.

Efforts are already underway on upgrades necessary to bring the new plant on line as a sulphur bentonite fertilizer production facility and adding capabilities such as sulphur forming in the future.

Dave Hans, Director, Fertilizer Marketing & Product Development for H.J. Baker's Tiger-Sul Products stated: "We are very excited about this facility. Not only will it be a top tier manufacturing facility with improved transportation logistics, including multi car rail spur. It will also be where we showcase the innovative work H.J. Baker's Tiger-Sul Products is doing. We will have an enhanced Research & Development facility and test-plots on site where we can see first-hand how our products help improve crop health and increase yield. We anticipate that this facility will be a strategic location for our sought-after Tiger-Sul University continuing education programs. We believe Irricana is a key to our future and will showcase our commitment to Ag Retailers and growers."

The Irricana facility is located 46 miles north of the Calgary plant. Originally constructed in 1998, it was design for sulphur processing.
